SHERIFF AFTER RATY.Alleged Horse Thief to Go Back to Idaho.

Sheriff Samuel Harrop of St. Anthony, Ida., came to Ogden Sunday for Lou Ratty, who was arrested by Sheriff Wilson Saturday, charged with horse stealing and highway robbery. Ratty, with four others, was arrested in Idaho, but he managed to make his escape on horseback. He has a brother in this city, and this fact led the officers to believe that he would visit Ogden.

Want Week of Racing.

An effort is being made to hold a week of horse races at the fair grounds race track after the close of the state fair. The racing card which had been arranged on the local track for the three days of the fair was curtailed by the wet weather. The fair promoters have the matter under consideration, and it is possible to raise sufficient purses the races will probably be held.

Thieves Enter House.

The police department was notified Sunday afternoon of the larceny of an overcoat and two umbrellas, one with a valuable gold head, from the residence of J. F. Larsen, 238 Grant avenue.

Funeral Notices.

The funeral of Rex Lee, who died at the hospital from appendicitis a few days ago, will be held from Richey's undertaking parlors Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

shoulder to shoulder with them in their efforts. Hold out the hand of fellowship to them. We call upon all men to repent and especially call upon the Latter-day Saints to repent of their sins, follies and transgressions, and to serve the Lord the rest of our lives. We are anxious to keep the Lord's commandments that we may receive his blessings.

"I am impressed with the importance of the Latter-day Saints holding the Sabbath day in strict observance. We should refrain from labor and secular pleasures, and should serve the Lord. I believe that in addition to the attendance on the regular Sunday meeting the parents should make the day one of instruction for their children, so that when they are eight years old they can be received into the covenant of the Lord through baptism. I believe that the children should be taught in the home and the young people discouraged from visiting, hunting, fishing and other amusements. Treat the little ones wisely and do not make the instruction a burden to them, but make it pleasant. Teach them the songs of Zion and in so doing you will find pleasure as

Battle of Ballots Wages Merrily and End of Week Sees Special Prizes Go

It must be apparent to everyone who has given the matter thought that the contest has been conducted by The Herald is not only something altogether extraordinary in point of prizes offered and simplicity of conditions, but that it was instituted and will be handled only along the best business lines.

The careful person will, before embarking on any business venture, inquire: "What backing has it?" We do not believe any person has found it necessary to ask that question in this instance, because it is well known that the contest is "backed" by The Herald and The Herald believes in doing things well and proves its belief by its practice.

Successful institutions command respect, because they accomplish things. The Herald has long been known as one of the leading newspapers of the west, and at present has the largest circulation of any daily newspaper in Utah. The people of the Intermountain country know The Herald as a successful institution and have faith in it.

Nobody has, therefore, questioned the good faith of this contest and nobody will. Instead of bothering about such matters, the hustlers who have entered the contest are congratulating themselves on the opportunities presented and are going out after the votes.

The present week will be busy. The competition for the four special prizes ends Oct. 9, next Saturday. The number of votes polled by candidates at that time will determine who shall own two $25 diamond rings and two $50 gold watches. The store of J. H. Leyson & Co., where they were bought. Take a look at them. We invite careful examination of these and any of the other prizes, knowing we have nothing to fear from the most exacting scrutiny.

The prizes will be awarded to Salt Lake City contestants and two to candidates outside the city, the usual distinction between men and women contestants being followed in this case as in the others.

It should be remembered that the winning of one of the special prizes does not deprive a candidate from continuing in the contest for the capital prizes or the grand prizes. Victory in the competition for the special prizes simply means that four candidates have a splendid start toward winning other prizes later.

well as profit. May God give us the light and inspiration of his spirit.

After the choir had sung "Peace, Be Still," Apostle Heber J. Grant spoke. He said: "I am pleased at having the opportunity of meeting with so many of the Latter-day Saints. On my return from Europe I was pained to note that the Latter-day Saints were becoming careless in the observance of the Word of Wisdom. I, with the church, have urged the necessity of returning to this law of God. Many of the Latter-day Saints think that the breaking of the Word of Wisdom is a small matter, but I do not believe that it is a slight affair to do what God has commanded us not to do. The saving accruing from the following of this law is greater than the profits of the sugar industry in this state. The Latter-day Saints spend enough every year on liquor to build two sugar factories and maintain them. There are many of you who have always advocated the observance of this law. Thank the Lord, we have the right to stamp out the use of liquor, provided we make up our minds to do it. I deny the right of the government to sell the liquor to one man to tempt another to his hurt. I have often read a number of extracts dealing with temperance from this stand, and I believe that these extracts are put in a better way than I could put them."

Mr. Grant then proceeded to read a number of extracts dealing with the horrors of intemperance from "Leaves of an Old Lawyer" and also from the "Adversities of an Honest Saloon Keeper" and from a monograph by David Starr Jordan on "The Strength of Being Clean."

Resolution Is Adopted.

After commenting on these extracts and stating that every church family should determine to prevent the promotion of crime by putting down the saloons, Mr. Grant continued:

"We of the Church of Latter-day Saints wish to grow in strength and ability, and the surest road to this end is to follow the Word of Wisdom. I endorse with all my heart the teachings of President Joseph F. Smith, given you today. It was a rich pouring out of the spirit of the Lord. I now propose the following resolution to you:

"Believing in the word and teachings of President Joseph F. Smith, as set forth this morning, and the subject of temperance, it is proposed that all the officers and members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will do all in their power that can properly be done with law makers generally, to have such laws enacted by our legislature soon to be elected as may be necessary to close saloons and otherwise decrease the sale of liquor and to enact the Sunday law."

There was a thunderous chorus of ayes from the congregation.

"Those, if there be any such, who are opposed to this proposal signify by saying 'no.'"

There was a deep silence.

Apostle Ivins Talks.

Apostle Anthony Ivins then addressed the congregation. He said that the wishes of God which do not come as a direct command are nevertheless binding on God's people. In order to comply with God's law, repentance is necessary, and the forsaking of all unrighteousness. He said that it was necessary that they be born of the spirit in order to enter heaven. He announced that he did not believe in coercion. That we ought to obey the law because we love it, and not because it threatens penalties. He said that the greatest mission of the church is to teach righteousness for the love of it.

NOTABLE ATTENDANCE AT THE MEETING OF SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION

At the meeting of the Deseret Sunday School Union held last evening at the tabernacle the old officers of the union were sustained, with the exception of Thomas B. Evans, a member of the general board, who had been honorably discharged to accept the presidency of a bank. Of the fifty-six stakes of the church fifty-five were represented, which is the best record of attendance made for the last ten years.

After the Provo tabernacle choir had sung "Lead, Kindly Light," Apostle Heber J. Grant opened the meeting with prayer and Secretary George D. Pyper called the roll of stakes.

Joseph F. Smith was sustained as general superintendent; George Reynolds as first assistant general superintendent; D. O. McKay as second assistant general superintendent; G. D. Pyper as general secretary; and John F. Bennett as general treasurer. The old general board of twenty-nine members was also sustained. Miss Fay Loose then sang a soprano solo.

David O. McKay addressed the meeting on the organization and functions of the Deseret Sunday School Union. Mr. McKay explained that the union is divided

"There's a Reason."

Among the leaders at the balloting now stands are: Ellen Hansen of district A; Mrs. G. D. Barker of district B; H. H. Barker and Captain Burbridge of district C; Dr. Curtis A. Wherry of district D; Margaret Leigh, Blackfoot, Ida.; Mamie Brew, Pocatello, Ida.; of district E; Mrs. Marie Hethke, Park City, Utah; of district F; Cora Jewel, West Jordan, Utah; Amelia Madson, Brigham, Utah; of district G; Mrs. Nora Gilbert Christensen, Murray, Utah; Wanda Sosinski, Bligham, Utah; of district H; Lyndell, Utah; of district I; Annie-Lewis, Seofield, Utah; and Della Daniels, Payson, Utah, of district H.

Besides showing the wide range of interest in the contest, the present standing shows that candidates in districts outside Salt Lake City are making a strong bid early in the game. The standing also indicates either that the ladies are becoming active earlier than the men or that they are recording their votes more promptly.

Present standings indicate little, however. The contest is young and one will "rest up a while" only at the risk of losing. The "line-up" as it stands today may be changed in an hour. It is no secret to the managers of the contest that many candidates will soon be securing votes in large quantities. Every day until Oct. 9 will mark the closing of the national candidates for the home stretch to win the big prizes.

As votes cast before next Saturday will have greater "counting" value than those cast after that date, it is regarded as certain that many "dark horses" will come into the light before this week closes.

Candidates should not forget that votes may be secured by selling advertising coupon books as well as by securing subscriptions for the paper. Sales of coupon books have practically the same relative value as subscriptions for the paper. Candidates cannot afford to overlook this feature of the contest. The Herald's classified advertising columns are liberally patronized every day, and as the advertiser saves money by using the coupon book, candidates easily favor their friends as well as themselves by pushing the sale of the coupon books.

into three bodies, the general board, the stake boards and the local boards. The function of the general board is to represent the first presidency in Sunday school matters throughout the whole world, and its decisions are final in all matters. The stake boards represent the presidency of the stakes in the same manner, and the local boards represent the bishopric of the wards in the same way.

After the Schubert quartet had sung, Judge H. H. Rolapp spoke on the duty of parents in training their children. He urged that the parents join the parents' classes of the Sunday schools that they might learn the best way of putting their children on the right path. Judge Rolapp stated that parenthood was not only one of the greatest blessings, but that it carried with it enormous responsibilities and that these responsibilities ought to be borne by the parent personally. He said that if this duty was not properly performed by all parents it would not have been necessary for the church to pledge itself to the cause of temperance, and that parents who have merely given food, shelter and other material gifts to their children have in reality given them less than nothing.

David Reese of Provo then sang a tenor solo, and Professor J. E. Talmage addressed the meeting on the subject of "Some things we do know." He said, "for God has revealed them to us, but many things we do not know and we have no right to try and add to the revelation which God has made."

He said that we are too prone to confuse facts with our own speculations and that we are treading on dangerous ground when we attempt to put words into God's mouth. He advised that Sunday school teachers draw all truth from the word of the Lord without attempting to add to that word.

MINING MEN COMING HERE

(Special to The Herald.)

Houghton, Mich., Oct. 4.—Edward Uleath, Charles Chynoweth and Thomas Bastian of Calumet and Frank James of Hancock have gone to Salt Lake City to close up the consolidation deal between the South Columbus and the Monitor and Montana companies, which has been under consideration for some time. The South Columbus is also to absorb the Columbus-Wedge, the South Columbus stock to be increased from 300,000 to 500,000 shares for this purpose. The Columbus-Wedge people are willing to accept 115,000 shares of the new stock for their property. There are 150,000 shares in the treasury of the South Columbus, so that out of 100,000 shares of the extra issue will have to be used in the land purchase.

BLUNDERS FROM THE VERY FIRST

tion of Governor Cummins of Iowa as Taft's running mate, and had he been equal to his job he could have, and would have, done it. He thought his judgment was better than that of the president and Mr. Taft, and he surrendered to the anti-Roosevelt crowd and acquiesced in the nomination of Jim Sherman, thereby handicapping the Republican ticket, for Sherman deserved no place in it. That was Mr. Hitchcock's first blunder.

Since he was selected as chairman, Hitchcock selected Dupont of the powder trust—a man under fire in the federal courts for violation of the anti-trust law—to take charge of the speakers' bureau. Had he been a seasoned politician, he would have known that the trust question was to be one of the paramount issues of the campaign, and he would not have chosen a trust man for so prominent a place. The removal of Dupont was a rebuke on Hitchcock and would have induced a more sensitive man to resign.

Hitchcock blundered in another respect; he started out to conduct the campaign in the same manner that he was accustomed to conduct the office of first assistant postmaster general. He was going to card-index all voters in the United States and appeal directly to each Republican. He evidently thought of the extent of the cost of such a scheme, and was astonished to learn that it would require $200,000 to index the voters of Massachusetts alone. Of course, this scheme was knocked in the head, and the time and money wasted by Mr. Hitchcock in preparing for his card index will be a serious handicap to the party in November. This was one of the reasons why Senator Crane of Massachusetts—former leader of the anti-Roosevelt Republicans—was called in and given virtual control of the fight.

That the Republicans realize that they are in serious straits is evidenced by the fact that they have been obliged to compromise with such men as Senator Crane—men opposed to the Roosevelt policies, and who would oppose their continuance if Taft were elected. Having been obliged to call upon Crane and men of his type to pull them out of a hole, the Taft people would be compelled, in the event of his election, to make concessions to these men by way of return for their services in the present campaign. President Roosevelt would never have consented to putting Crane in power, were it not that he realized the danger which confronts Taft. Nor would he have become involved in an unseemly correspondence with Mr. Bryan had he not believed that it was up to him to save the Republican ticket. All in all, the Republican managers have made a terrible mess of the campaign so far, and there is every indication now that Bryan will be the beneficiary.
